DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: On page 1, line 16, "the" should read --The--.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The specification states that the claws 123 extend into holes 112 to secure the caps 12 to the base 11. However, there is no mention of any structure with which the claws engage in order to rigidly connect the caps to the base. For example, do the claws protrude through the holes to engage the outer surface of the base, or do the claws engage structure such as a ridge which is inside each hole? The lack of this information would impose an undue burden on one of ordinary skill in the art to make and use the invention.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kimura et al (US 4,859,152) in view of Cheng et al (US 5,670,928) and Hashimoto (US 4,968,224). Kimura et al disclose the invention substantially as claimed. See figure 3 which shows two frame members 34, 34a for clamping magnets therebetween. One frame member is readable as a base and the other as a cap. The frames are connected by pins, such as pin 40, and apertures such as corresponding aperture 38. However, Kimura et al do not disclose the use of claws for rigidly connecting the frame members, and caps having a flange to support a magnet. Cheng et al disclose two members 10 and 11 which are connected by claws 15 on one member which engage holes 16 on the other member. This connection is functionally equivalent to the connection of pins and holes of Kimura et al. Furthermore, the structure of Cheng et al would result in a more rigid connection as compared to the pins of Kimura et al since the claws would resist separation of the members 10 and 11. Hashimoto discloses a magnet holder for a diaphragm pump which has a flange 460C for retaining a magnet (see figures 3 and 4). In view of these teachings, it would have been obvious to substitute claws and correspondingly shaped holes for the pins and holes of Kimura et al, and to provide each of the frame members of Kimura et al with flanges for retaining the magnets in position.
